I Feel Like Sarah Connor: The Coming Financial Collapse

April 27, 2019

In the movie Terminator 2, the character Sarah Connor is in a mental institution warning about Judgment Day – the day when Skynet wakes up and triggers a nuclear holocaust. She knows what's coming and freaks out as she desperately tries to warn the therapist and other listeners of the approaching Armageddon.

[Terminator 2 Sarah Connor freak out / 1:40]

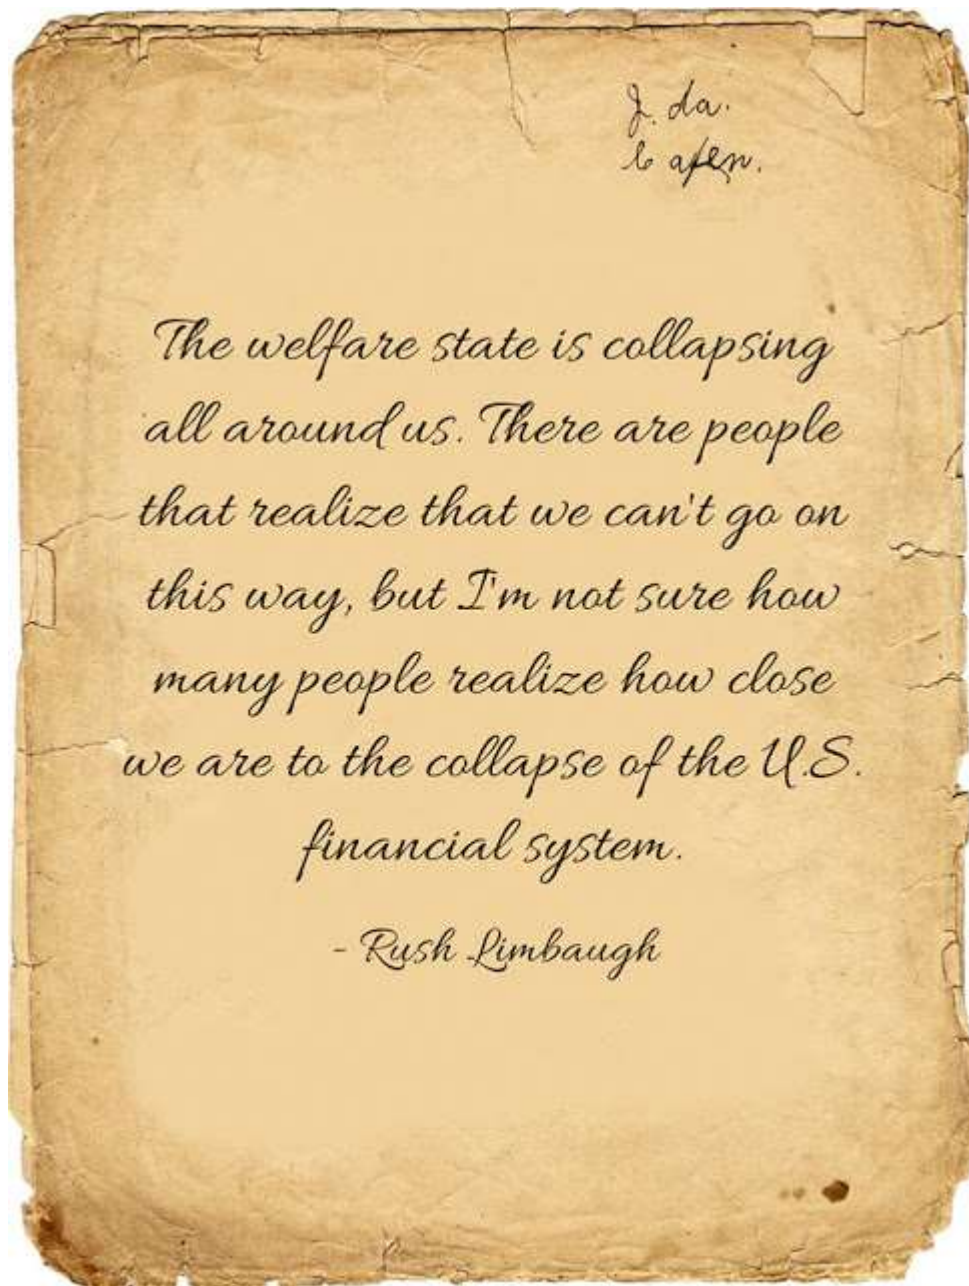

Again, she does this because she knows – KNOWS – what will happen.

Similarly I, too, can see an ending approaching: a financial cliff stemming from the world's debt. In a very early essay, RUNNING OUT OF FINANCIAL ROAD, I outlined the financial situation of the world. Not just the US, but the world ([comment added for clarification of the quote, link in original]):

*I speculate that even if we strip-mined the planet down to the Moho [to pay off the world's indebtedness], this could not be repaid.*

My opinion has not changed; indeed, it is reinforced at least weekly in my readings:

there will be some kind of financial reckoning for the debt – again, globally, not just in America – that we have quantitative-eased out of thin air.

(HT Gorges)

I HEAR IT ON THE RADIO

Every morning I drive the younglings to school and hear ads for financial planning this, retirement nest egg management that, money management risk management the other.

All admitting uncertainty and risk. but none discussing anything truly outside a relatively normal future.

My late father worked until he was 80 because he loved what he did. He then enjoyed his retirement, having saved up for it and, because of where he worked, having a pension as well – a rarity these days. But even as liberal as he was, I truly doubt he was aware of the calamity that's coming. Because...

“If something cannot go on forever, it will stop.”

— Herbert Stein, What I Think: Essays on Economics, Politics, & Life

IT'S DOUBLE-DOWN TIME

Lately, a new madness has entered the political fray; Modern Monetary Theory: An Age-Old Fraud (bolding added):

*If you haven't heard about “Modern Monetary Theory,” you will. Simply put, it holds that governments don't need to worry about budget deficits. On the contrary, they can finance anything they want to do, simply by printing money.

*If you think that sounds stupid, you are right. Yet the theory is becoming popular on the American left. It has been espoused by, among others, Alexandria Ocasio-Cortez, who explains that we can pay the $90 trillion bill for the Green New Deal by printing the money.

Or maybe not so new. My father, who should absolutely have known better, once said to me “deficits don't matter” when I questioned the wisdom of ongoing government borrowing. Ironically, in his collection of paper money he left to me when he died was a Weimar-era note – a consequence of the same run-the-printing-presses mentality (NB: image below is not the one, which is framed and on the wall):

(From ebay)

Of course, he was far left in general and it's possible he actually subscribed to the idea of the Cleveland Plan, a strategy to bankrupt the nation, something I discussed in or the Cloward-Piven strategy to bankrupt the nation, something I discussed in Socialism's Gateway Drug (links, bolding, and italics in original; embedded quote "super-indented"):

I strongly suspect that most readers, certainly those on the right-hand side of the spectrum, have at least a passing familiarity with the Cloward-Piven Strategy (links in original – side note, this is a great website in general to understand the Left's tactics, policies, goals, and players):

First proposed in 1966 and named after Columbia University sociologists Richard Andrew Cloward and his wife Frances Fox Piven (both longtime members of the Democratic Socialists of America, where Piven today is an honorary chair), the "Cloward-Piven Strategy" seeks to hasten the fall of capitalism by overloading the government bureaucracy with a flood of impossible demands, thus pushing society into crisis and economic collapse.

Crisis and economic collapse, leading to chaos.

If he did – and there's no way to know, but emotionally I'm giving him the benefit of the doubt – then he was farther Left than I thought. Regardless, the "new" Left is embracing a financial path of relentlessly accelerating debt and running the presses that cannot not lead to ruination. As it always has; multiple times; 28 Countries Have Experienced Hyperinflation In the Last 25 Years (+89K Views):

(Image source)

As it inevitably will:

(Image source)

A CACOPHANY OF CLAXONS

So many are attempting to call attention to this that I cannot possibly list them all. Let me cite just a few; National debt is a looming avalanche that must be addressed (bolding added):

Global debt is on track to hit new highs this year, according to Vitor Gasper, director of fiscal affairs at the International Monetary Fund.

In 2016, global debt hit a record 225 percent of world wealth, according to the IMF's Global Debt Database, which tracks 190 countries from 1950 to the present day. That figure measures debt taken on by companies, governments, you and me.

"Global debt is very high," Gasper said. "The headline number is $164 trillion (in 2016). The indication that we have after 2016 is that in nominal dollar terms, that has continued to grow."

Debt is a double-edged sword. It's fueling global growth at a time of stagnant wages. But as the 2008 financial crisis illustrated so painfully, when a bubble does eventually burst, the losses ripple far and wide and we just don't know enough about how all that global debt is linked.

The True Size Of The U.S. National Debt, Including Unfunded Liabilities, Is 222 Trillion Dollars (bolding added):

The truth is that we are just going to keep accumulating more debt until the system completely and utterly collapses.

And even though the federal government is the biggest offender, there are also others to blame for the mess that we find ourselves in. State and local governments are more than 3 trillion dollars in debt, corporate debt has more than doubled since the last financial crisis, and U.S. consumers are more than 13 trillion dollars in debt.

When you add it all together, the total amount of debt in our society is well above 300 percent of GDP, and it keeps rising with each passing year.

The US may not be the first to go. But when it does go, given our percentage of the global economy we will topple the rest of the world with us global economy, we will topple the rest of the world with us.

We Have Seen This Happen Before The Last 3 Recessions – And Now It Is The Worst It Has Ever Been (bolding added):

*Never before in human history have we seen so much debt. Government debt is at all-time record levels all over the world, corporate debt is wildly out of control and consumer debt continues to surge.

*No, everything is not going to be just fine. In fact, we have perfectly set the stage for the worst financial meltdown in human history.

*At this point nobody has put forth a plan to fundamentally change the system, and there is no way out.

All that is left to do is to keep this current bubble going for as long as humanly possible, and then to duck and cover when disaster finally strikes.

*Update: And a post discussing the possibility that the local, county, and state pension crisis could turn into a federal government bailout; I warned about a pension bailout . . . now, guess what?

For years I've been pointing out how federal, state and local government pensions (not to mention many private pension funds, particularly those organized by trades unions) are woefully underfunded, sometimes so much so that they're effectively bankrupt already. I've also warned that we can expect calls for a federal bailout of such funds, forcing the burden for their deficits onto the US taxpayer instead of those who are rightfully responsible for them.

Peter was 100% correct – the bailout, as it can't be anything but, is being discussed. It's couched as a loan, but really, there's no way it's getting paid back. And if the Democrats win in 2020, look to your 401k. Collectively, 401K plans are trillions in market capital assets. Also, and do not doubt it as I've already had it thrown at me when I bring it up, the Left will ask "Don't you trust the 'full faith and credit of the federal government'?" No. No. No I don't... and was excoriated for not being patriotic.

QUESTIONS THAT NEED ANSWERS

IMHO the three relevant questions are:

- WHEN WILL IT HAPPEN?
- HOW BAD WILL IT GET?
- HOW LONG WILL IT LAST?

When will it happen? may have the most defined answer; UNEXPECTEDLY: Medicare and Social Security Circling the Drain (link in original):

The entitlement crisis, which will impact America's most vulnerable before all others, is headed straight for us like the asteroid from Armageddon.

Seven years, at most, is all we have.

No, it won't all start crumbling into a huge heap right away. But when our entitlement crisis hits that's when any notion of stability will go out the window... and that's when, at least in my estimation, all the various countries (like China) will start making the trade-off of bad pain now by cutting off loans, or worse pain later if they continue to loan. And speaking of China specifically, they have their own cliff coming; China's pension crisis (bolding added, links in original):

But the more immediate problem for China is that nearly half of China's 31 provincial regions expect to report operating shortfalls in their basic pension funds by 2022, compared to six in 2015. Despite federal subsidies, the northeastern China rust belt province of Heilongjiang was forced in to begin delaying pension payments in July 2018.

*The international accounting and consulting firm KPMG issued a white paper that estimated in dollar terms that China's state social security system without "significant" reforms would see its funding gap spike from $590 billion in 2017 to $1.1 trillion in 2025.

My personal bet? Somewhere around 2022-2023 we'll see signs of instability but - and I'm atmospherically-engineering this prediction - it won't truly crash until 2025 or so. Perhaps that's wishful thinking, but...

How bad will it get? is a harder question to answer. Certainly we're seeing horrors upon horrors in countries like Venezuela – where they're drinking sewer water, eating rats, pets, and garbage. Zoo animals have long-ago made the transition from caged to sliced-and-diced. Medicines are gone, power is intermittent at best. Women, even former professionals like doctors and engineers and teachers, are now in the oldest profession - seeking to make ends meet financially by making ends meet literally Venezuela's economic crisis ...

[Venezuela's economic crisis fuels sex trade / 3:04]

Social cohesiveness, and fundamental ethics and morality, will be a big factor in this. Right now, the Left is doing its level best to sunder America into different interest groups – divide and conquer – and I truly doubt, given the corruption of society in general, plus the imposed diversity from the Elites importing a new, more compliant (and definitely less civilized) voting population, that people will be as orderly as they were in the Great Depression.

(Image source)

Somehow I do not see such disciplined, patient queuing happening these days. After all, if modern people will do this over a TV, what will they do when the food runs out?

(Image source)

How long will it last? is also difficult to gauge; though a cursory scan of history (excellent PDF!) seems to indicate a visually-estimated mean of 2-3 years. Venezuela's crisis is ongoing, and it has been several years. The Weimar-era hyperinflation also lasted for several years and resulted in the rise of the Nazis (with all the bad things that happened after) – though the Versailles Treaty's humiliations and wounded German pride had a lot to do with that too.

90 Years Ago: The End of German Hyperinflation

Hyperinflation in the Weimar Republic

Zimbabwe's woes are ongoing, though IMHO that's also cultural, which is a significant problem throughout Africa – i.e., it's not just an economic crisis.

DUCK AND COVER

(HT Gorges)

OK, so now what?

Do your own investigations and research. Make plans that are congruent with your situation. Even if you have water, a water filter, a toilet, supplies, and canned goods, / situation. Even if you have water, a water filter, sanitary supplies, and canned goods / etc. for a month or two you will doubtless be far better off than the majority of people caught with their financial pants down. You need a plan to hold & defend what you've got. What can you stock as trade items? Who do you trust to be with you? What skills do you have (or choose to develop) to be an asset as things recover?

And so on. Pick and choose with whom you discuss this; some will be Teflon Intellectuals like a former leftie-loonie coworker who once dismissed, with a sneer and a wave, "There's not going to be a financial crisis"! Others will take note, and make their own plans – to take what you have; Liberalism in One Sentence (italics in original, bolding added)

*Well, one day yet another big box of Mainstay bars arrived at the office, and I got questioned about it. Did I really think that things could collapse? Yes. Did I really believe that it might be some time before things stabilize? Yes. And so someone said, with an enormous grin on his face, but sincere tone... "Well, I guess I'll just come to your house when things get bad." And that sh*tbird ex-Marine first mocked me saying that "nothing's going to happen" – i.e., It can't happen here. Then he said "And if something does happen, I know your address and I'll come take food from you." (And any Marine or servicemember who thinks this is acceptable, you too are a sh*tbird.)*

Both are, more or less, expressing the same idea... the idea that they can – like Aesop's grasshopper – dance and play and frolic... but when the time comes, the ant (i.e., me) will be expected to cough up my "fair share" and give to them. The one who smiled is a clothes horse, always to-the-nines fashionable. I know where his discretionary money goes. That ex-Marine? Also has things that he spends money on besides prepping. And they're not the only ones to express this plan to just come to my house when the fecal matter hits the air motivator because, obviously, I will just share what I've put aside with them out of the goodness of my own heart.

It's coming, and all the hopes in the world won't change that. Plan. Decide. And prepare.

And my own plans? Well, mum's the word.

I take Democrats citing the Constitution as seriously as I'd take a hooker praising fidelity and chastity.

* atmospherically-engineering this prediction ****

Got to love that witticism. And "make ends meet." Bravo Nitzakhon.

It's all deliberate. Mass third-world immigration, lunatic worship of "diversity," lunatic worship of revolution, willful/malicious blindness v-a-v the realities of Islam, destruction of Christian, Western culture, pushing wildly destructive economic nostrums (socialism, reckless debt), fiscal madness, and femo-homo lunacy. Now, the question is who is pushing this?

I hate to say this but organized Jewry and Jewish media ownership have pushed this and made all this unmentionable. American culture is twisted in a knot over insane mass immigration, homo-perversion, hysterical feminist theorizing, and our bizarre support for Israel, a foreign nation that is not our ally or friend. And organized Jewery has been in the forefront of agitating for opening the floodgates of non-European immigration, as Prof. McDonald has shown. But don't dare even hint at this.

It is acceptable in America to drag traditional America through the mud and locate all evil in the 12-year period of National Socialism but it is never, ever acceptable to point out that the Bolshevik revolution was dominated by Jews and that Genrik Yagoda murdered more Christians in the Soviet Union than Hitler murdered Jews. Barbara Lerner Spectre is married to the man who is or was the chief rabbi of Sweden so it's impossible to say that she articulated ideas that are unique to her and represent her personal pathology. She clearly showed her hostility to "monolithic" Europe, which anyone with a functioning brain knows means "white" Europe. Her eyes showed that she knew she was lying. The vast majority of Jewish organizations agitate for mass third-world immigration:

"Rabbi Rachel Grant Meyer explains 'Jewish organizations of all kinds' are the pushing this agenda [refugee admission]. She says, 'Can you image over 1,200 Rabbis to agree on one thing? But, agree they did! And what they agreed on was to ask our elected officials not to halt, or even limit, the United States Refugee Admissions Program.'" Link.

I'm willing to see this view fairly and logically shot down but my prediction is that all that would issue from the heights of the ADL would be charges of anti-Semitism. End of story.

The bottom line, however, is the disastrous third-world invasion of the West and, in particular, US monetary, fiscal, and military madness are not founded on anything remotely rational . . . or honest. Never underestimate human stupidity but it is simply impossible that any of this madness is the result of highly educated people honestly concluding that worship of diversity, pursuit of foreign wars for Israel, and embrace of economic madness are remotely like policies that make for the long-term health of the nation.

Utter madness in ALL areas of Western life is the summum bonum in these times. All else is diversion or [nonsense]. If I've got it all wrong then who is pushing this? It is not accidental or ignorant. It is deliberate. Who?

NITZAKHON January 24, 2020 at 3:46 PM

Well, somehow I missed this comment. It demands answering.

Let me begin by agreeing with you on something fundamental: both mass migration as well as the debt crisis are (mostly) intentional. As are the pushes to incorporate perversion into our schools, push the culture in general, etc. Someone wants Western Civilization destroyed. Where we differ is who that someone is.

(Side note: On the drive to school this morning I was telling the kids that we're considering shifting to the public schools; this is simply an economic thing as their private school is crushing financially. Anyway, I told them that if they say they're going to go to a "special reading" and it's a guy dressed like a woman, walk out and tell the school to call me; I've also been discussing transgenderism and how men will get surgery to change their parts – both think this is disgusting. Same for if they say it's OK for a boy to date a boy, etc.)

A brief look at "Refugee Resettlement Watch" will show the vast numbers of agencies profiting off the refugee flow; a couple are Jewish, most are not. But let's look behind the curtain and cite Evan Sayet's "Plopping Jew" hypothesis – one with which I agree:

<https://archives.frontpagemag.com/fpm/why-jews-support->

democratic-party-evan-sayet/

The vast majority of Jews in America – and arguably the world – are Leftists first, and Jews after. You mentioned that hawk spit POS Spectre. Have you read my piece on her?

<https://redpilljew.blogspot.com/2018/05/g-d-damn-you-barbara-spectre.html>

NITZAKHON January 24, 2020 at 3:46 PM

Part 2

<https://redpilljew.blogspot.com/2018/05/g-d-damn-you-barbara-spectre.html>

And I will bet that few, if any, of those 1200 Rabbis are hard-core Orthodox.

At the risk of twisting my arm patting myself on the back about Judaism and Jews, in general we tend to be very successful. In many fields of endeavor, whether good or bad, Jews do rise to the top. This isn't because we're chosen* but because we value education, hard work, etc. Thus, it is natural that Jews will percolate to the top in any field and thus, to a casual observation, it seems like Jews are running the show. (Walter Williams had a column in which he showed how Jews in Weimar Germany were a fraction of the population but significant portions of lawyers, dentists, and doctors – all well-earning and prestigious careers that aroused envy; bankers too, as many medieval laws drove Jews into that field, thus unwittingly setting Jews up, later, to be targeted because banking is a very profitable industry.)

It's statistically valid to state that the more religious a Jew is, the more Conservative politically they are. Like many correlations it's not perfect, of course. So thinking of it another way, generally, the more religious a Jew is the less likely they are to think internationalist/globalist because they understand – as the Talmud teaches – the law of the land is the law. One of the inferences from this SHOULD be that we have no right to change the laws of the land to suit our needs, especially if we are a minority. Compare / contrast this with the Left, who view laws as speed bumps on their way to "perfecting" humanity.

Marrying to this less-religious shroud is tikkun olam, the idea that we are obligated to heal the world. This has been strongly misinterpreted, and if you're interested I can point you to some resources discussing this. One, though, is the book:

To Heal the World?: How the Jewish Left Corrupts Judaism and Endangers Israel
<https://amzn.to/2RSZTqE>

I believe that, deep down, most JINOs wrap themselves in this SJW stuff to make up for the fact that they're not actually performing the mitzvot (commandments). Being kosher, for example, is hard. Saying prayers daily is hard. Binding tefillin takes time. Easier to cloak oneself in SJW stuff and rationalize that you're doing Hashem's work than to, actually, do Hashem's work. And Hashem's work concerns Jews, not saving / remaking others.

I'd like to correspond directly about this as you're an intelligent writer and thoughtful person – how can we safely exchange emails?

Let me conclude by repeating, ad nauseum, that Leftists – Jews and Gentiles alike – see themselves as missionaries for Marx and other Leftist carp. They've become convinced that western civilization has to die. The real questions for us are 1) how do we, you Christian, I Jew, both Conservatives who recognize the threats, unite, and 2) how do we unveil the actual movers behind this, and 3) how do we convince others, again Jew and Gentile and other religious / groups, of these threats without sounding like we need padded rooms and massive medication?

* The idea of being chosen is not that we're ABOVE anyone, but rather that we are chosen by Hashem to be exemplars through whom Hashem will judge all mankind in the end days. SJW-ism, which includes theft by force of what others have, destroying countries, being accessories/enablers to all the crimes that migrants commit, would NOT fall on that list.
