The Power of Political Myth - Part 2 (of 3)

April 28, 2020

Note: I was going to make this a two-parter, but the second half seemed "just a tad" too long, so... part 3 coming, Thursday afternoon or Friday morning.

EXAMPLE: ALMOST EVERYTHING THE ENEMEDIA REPORTS ABOUT TRUMP

Trump is a Russian Agent

Of course he is </sarc>. That's why he sent Ukraine, who is fighting Russian incursion, actual weapons rather than blankets & pillows like Barackus did. That's why the Mueller Report said that they couldn't find evidence of collusion, certainly not enough to even attempt an indictment on “obstruction of justice” – and given that we (theoretically) live under innocent until proven guilty that should be it. We’re now learning all sorts of things about Russian efforts in the start of the investigation to remove Trump. If you read the sites on my sidebar, for example, you understand the depths of the swamp and its fetid corruption – and are far better and more broadly informed than if you get your information solely from the New York Times-Traitor, the Washington Post-Fabricator, the Communist News Network, National Progressive Radio, etc.

But none of that swamp corruption matters. A scandal that makes Watergate look like a traffic ticket doesn’t matter. Like the FBI Memo didn’t matter.

Whether in comments sections on Disqus, or on LinkedIn, it’s a matter of outright faith in Putin being Trump’s puppeteer, then and now:

And nothing shakes that mythological belief – because they want it to be true, they need it to be true to rationalize how a mere... mere... a mere businessman could have outwitted and beat Her Heinous the Crone of Chappaqua.

Charlottesville and “Very Fine People”

One of the most infamous examples is the Charlottesville lie – that Trump called people waving Nazi flags “very good people”:

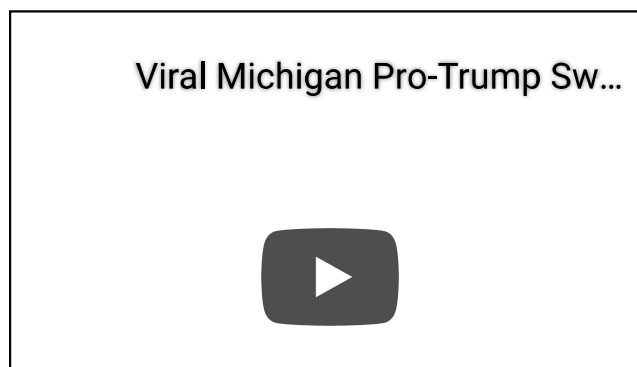

[The Charlottesville Lie / 5:47]

Also:

Trump Didn't Call Neo-Nazis 'Fine People.' Here's Proof.

Breitbart News' Joel Pollak: The Definitive Takedown of the Charlottesville 'Very Fine People' Hoax

And nothing shakes that. Speaking of Nazis, Bernie Bro fakes Nazi support of Trump:

Seriously – if you have to fake an incident, there can't be too many “natural” incidents happening.

Trump Screwed Up the WuhanFlu Response

First, as we know, Trump did the absolute right thing to shut down travel from China and Europe – as soon as we understood that this was not under control as were repeatedly assured by the CCP subsidiary called the WHO, and others. He did so as the Left screamed raaaaacist and tyyyyyrrant. And then they complain he didn't act soon enough. An extensive quote from 'Morning Joe' Goes Nuts, Screaming About Fox News: 'They Never Learn!' (links and italics in the original):

I've pointed out before that New York didn't report its first coronavirus case until March 1. Within two weeks of that first case, however, there were hundreds of people hospitalized with COVID-19 in New York, and the sudden nature of that “surge” can only be understood in the context of what we now know about the high percentage of asymptomatic cases. So if you want to cite to me quotes from President Trump or Fox News personalities from February or early March, expressing a belief that the threat of COVID-19 was exaggerated, you must first answer, what was the known number of cases at the time of the quote? And then you must produce evidence that you (or your preferred sources) were contemporaneously offering better information about the disease.

It was not until the first week of March that the size of the coronavirus threat became evident, and even then, there were still plenty of Democrats — New York Mayor Bill de Blasio among them — who didn't take it seriously, so it's not as if Republicans had a monopoly on doubt.

On Jan. 22, President Trump said the coronavirus was “totally under control” and, as far as anyone knew at the time, that was true. Those who claim Trump ignored advice from scientific experts must reconcile their claims with the fact that, until March, even Dr. Anthony Fauci suggested that the public was at little risk from the disease. The situation changed very rapidly, and Trump was understandably reluctant to shut down the entire economy over a comparative understandably reluctant to shut down the entire economy over a comparatively handful of cases. It was not until the pandemic in Italy spiraled out of control, prompting a nationwide lockdown order, that the threat here became undeniable.

The key to all the Trump Derangement Syndrome reactions to the coronavirus pandemic — including Joe Scarborough’s screaming rant — is the belief that somehow America is worse than other countries. But this belief is false, as the deaths-per-million rates demonstrate:

Belgium	576
Spain	482
Italy	423
France	335
U.K.	276
Netherlands	250
Sweden	213
Ireland	161
United States	152

Ultimately, it doesn’t matter what Trump did, or did not, do – on any topic. The enemedia would be leveraging the power of the information flow to slam Trump. To wit, the furor over Trump telling people to “inject disinfectant or to drink bleach” (and that situation with the guy who died because of taking fish tank cleaner after Trump said to is looking shakier and shakier):

Trump asked about light and disinfectant injected into the body. There are two existing therapies. UV therapy as well as ozone therapy. The one that has the left all riled up is ozone therapy. This has been used for cancer patients. O₃ gas is infused into the body as a DISINFECTANT to improve the intake of oxygen while ramping up the immune system, thus more efficiently killing bacteria and viruses. You can google it if you want. Trump asked the expert off to the side if testing was being done relative to applying this to the coronavirus. But of course NBC CBS CNN and company would take his words out of context to make it sound like he looked at the camera and said "hey let's all drink bleach". Disinfectant inside the body is indeed dangerous and should only be done by a doctor.

A footnote: if you take high amounts of vitamin C yourself, you will wind up with a buildup of hydrogen peroxide inside the body. Hydrogen peroxide is a DISINFECTANT. This is why vitamin C is so effective against viruses on its own.

(HT Gorges)

More on this, quick-hit style:

Trump's idea for "disinfecting" people to fight disease is already being done

Fake News: Trump Didn't Tell People to Inject Bleach or Lysol Into Their Veins

Media and Democrats lying again: No, Trump Did Not Tell People to Inject or Drink Bleach or Disinfectants

Trump Did NOT Say We Should Inject Ourselves With Disinfectant, He Said The Opposite

The list of outright lies about Trump goes on and on. Just saw this, so...

Trump is a tyrant... who is pushing emergency powers away from Washington and back towards the states; Trump is 'Rewriting the Book' on Emergency Response, Reagan's Deregulation Czar Tells Levin: (italics in original, added info in []):

[I]nstead of centralizing power to the executive branch during the coronavirus response, President Donald Trump has responded with deregulation and decentralization. [Hudson Institute fellow Christopher] DeMuth wrote in the Wall Street Journal on April 17 that this is the first time in U.S. history that a president has responded to an emergency in such a manner.

A strange kind of dictator who pushes power away from himself.

Like I said in my introduction, this essay is not intended to be a comprehensive fisking of the enemedia on Trump, or anything else. But rounding this out about Trump's response to the ChinaVirus, though, is Larry Elder:

[What Exactly Did the Experts Say About the Coronavirus Outbreak? | Larry Elder / 13:22]

And nothing shakes that.

EXAMPLE: THE LEFT'S MORAL AND INTELLECTUAL SUPERIORITY

“Considering how often throughout history even intelligent people have been proved to be wrong, it is amazing that there are still people who are convinced that the only reason anyone could possibly say something different from what they believe is stupidity or dishonesty.”

- Thomas Sowell

I’ve seen, innumerable times, people on the Left disparage anyone to the Right of Stalin as uneducated, ignorant, untraveled, etc. They exist on a higher moral and intellectual plane, you see – and if you don’t believe them, just ask them and they’ll tell you.

Don B. Sorry, I forgot most Trumpsters are semi-illiterate.

Whether one calls them Intellectuals or Anointed, they have an immensely inflated opinion of themselves.

Intellectuals and Society: Revised and Expanded Edition

The Vision of the Anointed: Self-Congratulation as a Basis for Social Policy

My response, as someone with two Masters degrees, whose articulation and discourse often makes me seem snobby as I grew up in a household with parents who both had doctorates and routinely talked at that level in family discussions, and in whose youth traveled extensively (e.g., Italy, England, Finland, Israel, Iran, Kenya, Zambia...) is, of course, derided and dismissed. Oh, did I mention that the last time my IQ was tested it was north of 150? And yes, I was a Mensa member for a while.

[Kahn, I'm laughing / 0:05]

I'm also called a Fascist and Nazi (I'm Jewish, dude), anti-immigrant (my late mother was, and my wife is, an immigrant), and a racist (my wife is not white - and our children bi-racial), and an Islamophobe (my wife is, at least nominally, a Sunni Muslim).

Thomas Sowell, a person I quote often including in this essay, had this to say about self-perceived intellectual, moral, and educational superiority (bolding added):

*"...the very commonness of common sense makes it unlikely to have any appeal to the anointed. How can they be wiser and nobler than everyone else while agreeing with everyone else?"

And another quote (bolding added):

"Virtually no idea is too ridiculous to be accepted, even by very intelligent and highly educated people, if it provides a way for them to feel special and important. Some confuse that feeling with idealism."

Superior. Special. Important. Wiser. Nobler. Here's a huge clue. They truly believe they are better, brighter, smarter, more educated. Beings towering above the hoi polloi rabble; beings who are formed from finer clay so, naturally, they are naturally entitled to rule.

Another ego-pumping myth.

SPECULATION: LIBERALISM AND MENTAL ILLNESS

The Liberal Mind: The Psychological Causes of Political Madness

Unhinged: Exposing Liberals Gone Wild

The Closing of the Liberal Mind: How Groupthink and Intolerance Define the Left

Liberalism Is A Mental Disorder

There are those who have observed that there seems to be a correlation between mental illness and liberalism; e.g., Does Liberalism Cause Mental Illness?. Before we jump to conclusions that it may be the other way around let me observe I could argue both directions.

Consider the Frantz Fanon quote from Part 1 about cognitive dissonance (requoted here for your convenience):

"Sometimes people hold a core belief that is very strong. When they are presented with evidence that works against that belief, the new evidence cannot be accepted. It would create a feeling that is extremely uncomfortable, called cognitive dissonance. And because it is so important to protect the core belief, they will rationalize, ignore and even deny anything that doesn't fit in with the core belief."

Having to constantly defend one's mind against inconvenient information is wearing. Shards and splinters of dreaded reality are bound to get through, even if not consciously recognized, and those can needle at a person causing mental illness. For example, consider the many abortion workers who take the job thinking they are helping women get rid of "clumps of cells"... only to start seeing arms, legs, etc., being removed from the women whose "clump of cells" they helped terminate.

One can only DENY for so long before, even if the reality is still buried and lurking in the subconscious, it starts to traumatize. So to assist in this defense they have developed the habit of snap-rejection of anything from outside their approved circles and self-esteem-pumping emotional beliefs. Hence why it is so hard to talk with them about – well – anything.

[Leftist Believes Emotions Trump Facts / 3:15]

(HT Moonbattery)

AN ATTEMPT TO SUMMARIZE

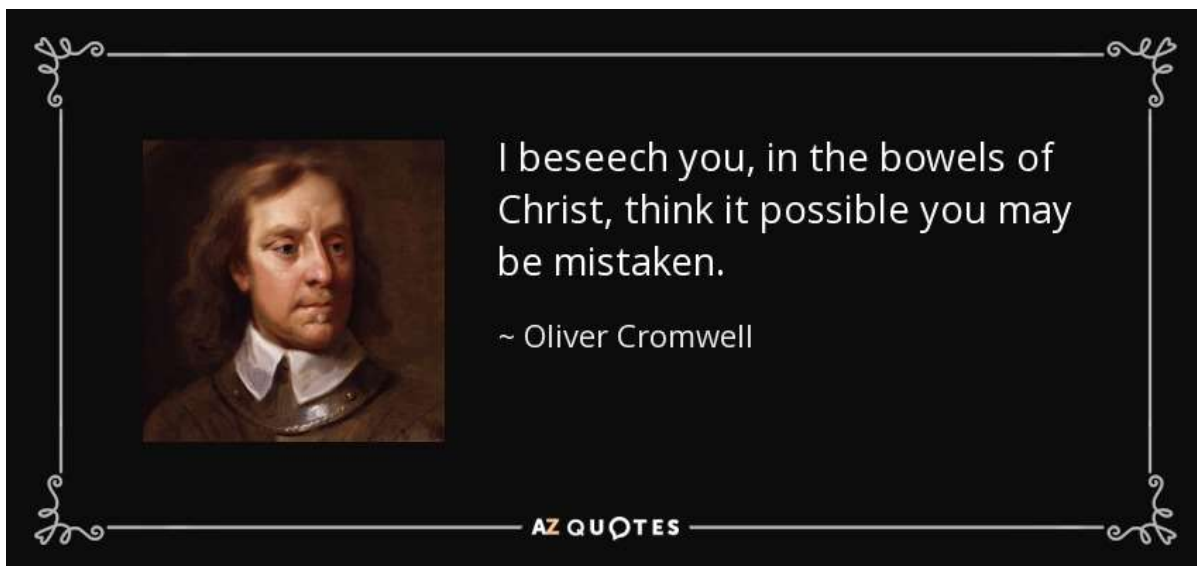

Better men and women than I have agonized over the mentality of the average Leftist and still not truly explained it. But as I pointed out to the author of that Leftists-are-cultists series (see part 1) and discussed with someone else just recently, I think there are some intertwined elements that we can use as at least a partial window.

First, we see a cocksure arrogance; it's one thing to be confident, but their surety of correctness goes far, far beyond that. If there's one thing that's driven my evolution it's been an intellectual curiosity and a willingness to admit I may not know everything, and might even be wrong (I thought I was wrong once, but I was mistaken). In other words, channeling Francis Porretto of Bastion of Liberty, we have humility (one of the Seven Cardinal Virtues).

Consider many of my shifts, politically and otherwise, that I described in my series about my own intellectual journey:

One Jew's Red-Pill Journey – Part 1 of ?One Jew's Red-Pill Journey – Part 2 of ?*One Jew's Red-Pill Journey – Part 3 of ?*One Jew's Red-Pill Journey – Part 4 of ?*One Jew's Red-Pill Journey – Part 5 of ?*One Jew's Red Pill Journey - Part 6 of (maybe 6?)

I was absolutely sure of my positions... until some sliver of data came in under my shields and caused me to think "That's weird..." Faced with a dissonance between what I "knew" was true and something that differed, no matter how small, I was willing to investigate. In other words, channeling Oliver Cromwell, I was willing to consider I might be mistaken.

On the Left, however, is an overweening pride in believing they are correct; that correctness is reinforced by their Collective, which leads to a second thing: r/K mentality.

Conservatives, being K-selected – see this excellent book, The Evolutionary Psychology Behind Politics: How Conservatism and Liberalism Evolved Within Humans, Third Edition – are willing to stand apart from the herd and stand our ground. We seek ABSOLUTE TRUTH, testable truth. Not out of obstinance or raw stubbornness, but out of conviction and a desire to be where the truth is.

Liberals, leaning towards r-selection, lean towards SOCIAL/RELATIVE TRUTH – i.e., the truth of the herd.

Why the difference? Change is hard, and it can be very hard. It can be very uncomfortable and difficult to admit that something you believed – especially something that made you believe you are a good person – is wrong. Heralding back to Sowell's conflict of visions, changing that fundamental assumption of how you view the world can wrack a person enormously. It's akin to people in therapy tending to shy away, get defensive, and even quit therapy as they're getting close to a revelation they really don't want to have coming to conscious recognition. (Not TMI, I think, but my wife was in therapy for a while and making progress. Some of the things she's told me about her childhood would blister paint – yikes! – but she was starting to get close to some serious revelations that her after-action conversations about her sessions hinted at... and she quit, saying "I'm not getting anything from this". Perfect example.)

It's far easier – SLOTH being another deadly sin – to stay with the herd, be praised for being in the herd and aligning with it, then to stand on one's own to test and determine the truth against reality. Doing so can cost friends, it can cost relationships with family; The Shunning. It can cost you your job. That's a hard path to choose.

And lastly, as I pointed out in Civilizational Collapse and the Brain, I believe there are fundamental brain-structure elements in why civilizations collapse. Could there be a dopamine sensitivity aspect as well? We get dopamine-hit pleasure from group support and praise. Those who are more sensitive to dopamine could well be more susceptible to being praised, and thus more likely to stay in the group that praises, rather than standing on one's own. And for rising societies where people increasingly congregate, higher dopamine sensitivity and thus conformance to the group could well be survival traits to work together and cooperate... until they become liabilities.

I know of no studies being done to test this. I wonder... Is there a correlation between neural dopamine sensitivity and political position?

One other factor: as I wrote in Hardwired for Faith, which aligns with that recent conversation with someone where we talked about the self-centeredness of today's society, including the ubiquitous selfie – a proxy for self-worship (image and link in original):

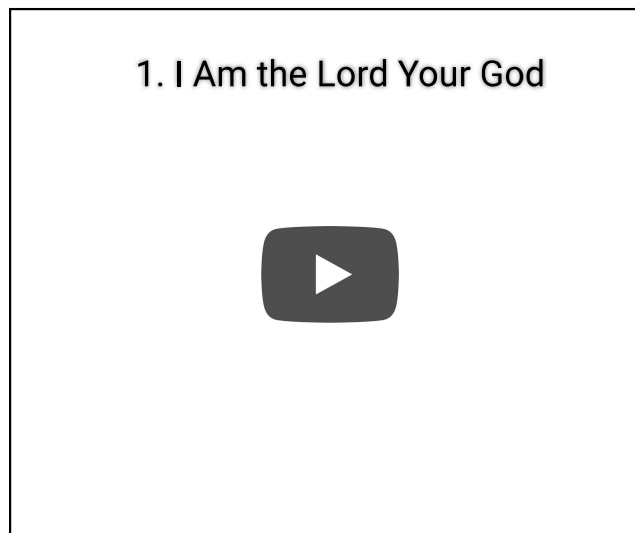

We have people who have come to worship themselves, whether consciously or not; consider the speed with which selfies – approaching the very definition of narcissistic admiration – have taken root in popular culture (and feeding off the sin of VANITY). We also have vanity fed by how many likes and comments we get on social media posts.

(Image source: Of Selfies & Narcissism)

If we change "inflated sense of self" into "belief in their own divinity" and "likes-and-shares metrics by others" into "prayers and supplications from worshippers" - easy substitutions IMHO - we see that they've indeed lifted themselves to demi-god status - even if not consciously-recognized.

Our “intellectual and moral elites” very often are not just non-believers, but openly hostile to the idea of a supreme being. They have become, in their eyes, gods – and are the “other gods” Hashem warned us about in the First Commandment.

[1. I Am the Lord Your God / 5:08]

They are vain, they are proud, they are emotionally convinced of their superiority. Hard to have a discussion with someone like that; harder, still, when they've decided they must be rid of you as a worm standing in the way of their plans.

Update: I've started to see "like swarming" on LinkedIn. As I noted in a very early essay,

The Leftist Sense of Self (all formatting and links in the original – not going to italicize because I'm lazy):

In the days when I debated in the local paper's comment section I was one of the few regularly-posting people from the Right. One day a Leftist sneeringly replied to one of my comments "Do you realize nobody ever 'likes' your comments?" My reply was something to the effect of "I didn't realize we were in a high school popularity contest."

But that got me thinking that Leftists are herd-beasts (I started keeping track – all the good little Leftists would like-swarm each others' comments). They move together. They think together. They studiously avoid thoughts that are not of The Collective. A former co-worker was, one day, ranting about eeeeeevil Conservative attacks on Planned Parenthood; he then commented "I don't know anyone who is against abortion." I raised my hand, and he sneered and dismissed me outright. That reprises the apocryphal quote "I can't believe Nixon won. I don't know anyone who voted for him."

Liberals are constantly checking their views against those of their fellows because, deep down, they're not sure of their own. I think that it's one reason they slide to further and further extremes. It also simply explains, as in Occam's Razor, why they can turn on each other so readily when one strays off the reservation. But consider this essay, which makes me think that these people actually get a high off the rush of approvals by their fellow liberals. So what happens with drug addicts? They constantly have to increase the dose. So, liberals constantly go further and further in being SJWs to exceed the last person who got adulation.

Ultimately, for the Leftist, it's not about what they think, it's about what others think about them. Read this essay by a psychologist whose work and essays I really like; alas, she's gone dark after Obama's re-election. And then READ IT AGAIN – it's that good. They're not strong enough to stand on their own convictions.

On LinkedIn, the only SM platform I am on, Leftists post and then other Leftists Like and comment to support and me-too the original. Whether it's on Russia-Russia-Russia or anything else they gin each other up. And, especially, whenever a Conservative (or really anyone sane) posts a rejoinder they swarm in to counter it.

Not that Conservatives don't do this too, I need to add, but it's obsessive with the Left. They cannot - CANNOT - let a Conservative have the last word and will worry at a thread's bone long after the Conservatives have given up.

It's like antibodies swarming an invader! And I think that's apt, and fits in well with my comment about conceptual splinters (above). And while I'm not qualified to make diagnoses, certainly not remotely, I think this quote from Narcissistic Personality Disorder: Top Five Symptoms fits quite well, don't you?

Narcissistic Personality Disorder (NPD) is a highly pervasive psychological disorder characterized mainly by self-centeredness. Narcissistic Personality Disorder symptoms include a complete and total lack of empathy, along with a highly-exaggerated sense of self-importance. Personality disorder treatment is very important. Like other personality disorders, NPD is extremely harmful when it becomes a persistent pattern of behavior over time, if left untreated and undiagnosed. Narcissistic Personality Disorder symptoms have far-reaching negative consequences. They adversely affect a patient's life, including their social, family, and work relationships.

Signs of Narcissistic Personality Disorder include an abnormal and constant need for affirmation, attention, and praise. These patients have long-lasting fantasies about attaining power and success. Narcissistic Personality Disorder (NPD) may even result in a person exploiting other people for personal gain. They do not have any sympathy or compassion for others.

Personality disorder treatment addresses the problem of an exaggerated sense of one's own achievements and abilities. These patients feel they are the "chosen ones." Expecting special treatment is also not uncommon with NPD patients. Narcissism, as a personality trait, is well-studied and researched; it is a term commonly employed to describe people who are more concerned and interested with themselves than other people around them.

Personality disorder treatment distinguishes between those who exhibit signs of narcissistic personality disorder and those who by their very nature are arrogant, confident, and self-centered. The latter may not suffer from Narcissistic Personality Disorder, or NPD, as they do not have the over-exaggerated or grandiose view of their own abilities and skills, which are the principal signs of narcissistic personality disorder.

Narcissistic personality disorder is confirmed only if a person exhibits five or more of the following symptoms:

- 1. They have an exaggerated view of their achievements and talents; there is absolutely no limit to their sense of self-importance.*
- 2. They are constantly preoccupied with fantasies of beauty, ideal love, power, brilliance, and even unlimited success.*
- 3. They think and believe that they alone are special and unique, and that they must be given an opportunity to interact with people of high-status and special institutions.*
- 4. They always expect, and in fact need, constant and excessive admiration.*
- 5. One of the most obvious signs of narcissistic personality disorder is deep-rooted chronic envy. This manifests itself in an overtly-arrogant and haughty attitude.*

I think it fits quite well indeed. Which also meshes well with the whole Liberal – Mental Illness correlation.
