Cultural Ion Thrusters 2 - Part A

March 27, 2019

In my essay Cultural Ion Thrusters I discussed the fact that the Left has been exerting slow pressure on America's culture (also Western Civilization in general, but that's not my main focus) – through the enemedia, through the educational system, intending to slowly, slowly, slowly move the culture's Overton Window towards degeneracy and civilization-cide on multiple issues as well as shifting its perception of / reaction to Socialism from dislike to like.

Even infinitesimal pressure exerted relentlessly over years and decades can affect enormous changes. Now that I'm aware, or "red-pilled" if you will, I'm seeing things that may or may not be intended to be in that effort, but let me list some.

As to why I think the relentless push towards degeneracy, specifically? To resist LUST and other sins requires self-control and the triumph of rationality over pure want-want-want. People who think, and come to conclusions based on evidence, facts, and traceable reasoning are far harder to control. People who think with their stomachs and palate (GLUTTONY) or genitalia (LUST) or ego (PRIDE) or anger (WRATH) or coveting (ENVY & GREED) or avoidance of hard work (SLOTH) are ruled by the baser emotions... and emotions are far more manipulatable.

(HT NinetyMiles)

EMBEDDED IN ENTERTAINMENT & ADVERTISEMENTS

Are all of these tidbits below examples of conscious effort? I don't know. I concede I might be overly paranoid on some of these. On the flip side, each and every one of these required someone to conceive, write, and incorporate them; in other words, they required conscious decisions to do them. I, personally, believe they are intentional by people who view themselves as the Anointed Philosopher-Kings, and therefore entitled to "nudge" us into rightthink.

So to start... my kids have started to watch, almost exclusively, the Disney XD channel. One of the shows is Black Panther's Quest which I admit – being a superhero fan from days from of old – is fun. In it, though, the nation of Wakanda is a country that has resisted contact, let alone influence, from other cultures. In one scene, the titular character is fighting a contender for the throne who criticizes his letting other cultures and peoples into their very insular, but very successful, country. The king says something to the effect of "Other peoples and other cultures make us stronger". I don't recall the precise wording but that's definitely the meaning. In other words, diversity is a strength.

This guy is cool, suave, and clearly a role model. And while I don't have any problems with learning about other cultures, having traveled extensively to many countries as a function of my late father's career, there is a difference between learning about them and letting them into your country – especially hostile cultures with missionary & militant supremacist faiths. **cough Islam cough**

Big Hero Six is a cartoon set in "SanFransokyo" in the future; my kids watch, usually as we're getting them ready for school (and I am desperately attempting to get their whole breakfast into their finicky little bellies). As each snippet fades to a commercial, more often than not the robot of the story says "It's ok to cry". Now let me be clear – yes, I do think that there are times when it is appropriate and perfectly acceptable to cry, even for men; for example, when I saw the first ultrasound of my oldest child I broke down and wept openly.

(My first child at their "wellness assessment")

This, I feel, is something qualitatively different. It means it is OK to surrender control of your emotions in general – a message totally opposite to that which I am trying to teach my children: that it is animals that lack control while humans can, and should, control their emotions. Again, going back to the above, people who reflexively let emotions rule them are more controllable by outside influences. (And as I tell my kids: if you let emotions control you, then fundamentally you are an animal, a trainable animal whose emotions can be manipulated and twisted by others – a concept whose basic foundation I took from the book Twerski on Spirituality.)

Another morning cartoon my kids see regularly is Big City Greens which is about a family of almost-stereotypical country “hicks” living in a generic “Big City”. I am impressed that there are some obvious moral lessons (e.g., in one episode the father turns down a sale of all his produce – at a substantial profit – because he can’t honor the entire amount being requested, and he won’t lie and say he can... another example was when the dad told his son that courage wasn’t not being afraid, but going through your fear). But regularly seen are couples that are obviously homosexual. Now as I’ve said repeatedly, e.g., in part five of my Red Pill Journey series, if people are gay, I have no problem with it. Not my cup of tea, and against G-d’s law, but that’s their decision... no, it is the normalization of it the thing to which I object. Another example is an episode where the family goat “identifies as a dog” - and they go along with it. I’ve told my kids that “they may call it a dog... but it’s still a goat”. A clear reference to gender self-identification.

How many legs does a dog have if you call his tail a leg? Four. Saying that a tail is a leg doesn’t make it a leg.

---Abraham Lincoln

In more adult programs, two specifically, there was an episode of - I want to say Tales from the Crypt - in which humans and some aliens were fighting. At the end the humans, determined to show their “good faith and desire for peace” the humans allow themselves to be killed which, in practice, opens the gates; the lead alien (who looks human of course) grins in what I saw as an “I can’t believe they’re this stupid” grin. In another one, maybe also from that series, but possibly from the Outer Limits, an alien ship sends a signal as it dashes for earth and makes a bee-line for an ocean - which is interpreted (rightly I think) as a hostile move, so the President orders a missile strike. That missile is shot down and the ship launches a counter-missile at Washington DC, the ship lands in the water, and only then is the message decoded: “We come in peace”. Really? My objection is that the President, hugging his wife in their last seconds, automatically assumes the alien message is truthful and laments his decision to fire the missile.

Even on the big screen testosterone-oozing “man’s man” James Bond is not immune from SJW pressures; License to Charge! James Bond to Drive Electric Aston Martin in Next Movie. Now, for those who want electric vehicles, and for whom they work economically / functionally – fine. But people will come away from the movie believing economically / functionally... time. But people will come away from the movie believing all the sh*t this battery-powered car can do is real. Because, doubtless, the screen car's performance is going to be completely divorced from the reality of the car.

MAINSTREAMING OBSCENITY, PERVERSION, AND INFANTICIDE

Every time I think the Oscars and other Hollyweird award shows can't possibly go lower fashion-wise, the edge moves. And it moves for a very simple reason: once a precedent is set, e.g., exposure of underwear (and there's no way this is accidental!), then it's on to an inference of no underwear because exposure of underwear has already been done. And then a "wardrobe malfunction" by a woman wearing no underwear (accidental my posterior; you wear no underwear and a dress like this, you're asking for (and expecting) "reveals" even if you don't deliberately make it happen).

*Mary has a little skirt
With slits way up each side
And no matter how Mary moves
Her legs she cannot hide*

*Mary has another dress
With a slit straight up the front
She doesn't wear it much*

After the novelty of "accidents" wears off, look for someone to have naughty bits exposed and obviously deliberately – breasts, nipples, or more – as a part of their outfit; all to breathless and fawning choruses of edgy, and daring, and avant-garde along with clucking tsk-tsking towards anyone who dares to disapprove of this based on – gasp! – morality and modesty and standards.

Mark my words, and I may be sounding snarky and cynical, but I prophesize that within a decade – assuming we're not all smoked meat for one reason or another – some very attractive woman will attend an award show in nothing but high heels, jewelry, and perhaps a scarf around her neck... and nothing else. Because between now and then more and more will get exposed until this becomes the only edgy, daring, avant-garde thing left to do.

Gender bending and cross-dressing are also coming into the glitterati mainstream in an attempt to expose, and then normalize, them (image from link just given).

And we have the normalization of horrors that used to be cause for back-alley "correction".

Some pedo-perv tries anything with my kids, I will not "get over it"... and they'd better pray the cops find them before I do.

Amazon just got caught selling pedo-appropriate child sex dolls (links and italics in original):

Currently, Bezos is allowed to ban books by conservative journalists like Tommy Robinson, and has banned all documentaries and books on the side-effects of vaccines, but thinks it's fine to peddle in child sex dolls.

Think about that.

The listings disappeared quickly, as you might imagine, with the roaches scurrying for cover once the light got turned on. But I suspect this is less a function of actual shame than a reaction to the light exposing the filth and the resulting outcry. And not just the Amazon sewage, but... someone had to conceive of this, get funding, do the product development work, and pay for production thinking this would be a viable commercial venture. Gag. Retch. It's being normalized, and the slippery slope is no illusion (links in original):

In case you missed it, Streisand told the UK's The Times that she believes Michael Jackson's accusers are telling the truth. She then made the jaw-dropping statement that Jackson's "sexual needs were his sexual needs, coming from whatever childhood he has or whatever DNA he has."

In 2014, the New York Times ran an op-ed by Margo Kaplan, a law professor at Dartmouth, that argued for the de-criminalization of pedophilia. In professor at Rutgers, that argued for the de-criminalization of pedophilia. In her article, Kaplan was very careful to never condone adults having sex with children. What she does do, though, is use much of the same language utilized by LGBTQ activists. She argues that pedophilia is not the same as molestation but is a sexual attraction to children. She adds, "A second misconception is that pedophilia is a choice."

Remember, it wasn't too long ago that pro-choice advocates were claiming that they only wanted abortions to be safe and rare. Now, in 2019, Democrats are openly advocating for infanticide. Leading up to the Obergefell decision, conservative Christians were assured that legalizing same-sex marriage would in no way impact us. Ask the scores of Christian businessmen and women who have been sued and harassed because they refused to violate their conscience and take part in a same-sex marriage if the Obergefell decision has impacted their freedom of religion.

STARTING FROM THE EARLIEST

From the very first days, politics comes into the classroom (and another example, supporting BLM in elementary school); it's so embedded that a proposal in Maine to prohibit political activism was opposed by teachers; Maine Educators Attack Bill to Prohibit Political Advocacy in Public Schools (bolding added):

A code of ethics for public school teachers that was recently introduced in the Maine Legislature is making headlines, and will serve as an important test-case for efforts to prohibit indoctrination in our nation's schools.

The bill does not restrict teachers from bring up contentious topics that are relevant to academic discussion, but forbids teachers from "advocat[ing] in a partisan manner for any side of a controversial issue” and requires that teachers “provide students with materials supporting both sides of a controversial issue being addressed and to present both sides in a fair-minded, nonpartisan manner.”

Educators’ responses to the bill have been swift and unhinged.

Of course they resist it. Bill Ayers, Barackus’ “some guy in the neighborhood”; Bill Ayers and the Subversion of Education (links in original):

Sol Stern of the Manhattan Institute has done masterful work over the years commenting on the state of education in America. Two years ago, he wrote about Ayers in "The Ed Schools' Latest-and Worst-Humbug". The article is a revelation. Ayers may have given up on the bombs, but he has found our nation's classrooms an ideal way to promote his revolutionary and anti-American views. Stern returned to the subject of Ayers' influence this week.

was instrumental in turning the education system that produced minds capable of handling materials like this:

[THE STRUGGLE FOR STUPIDITY / 4:34]

into centers of outright corruption and indoctrination into the Left:

[WHY JOHNNY CAN'T THINK: Progressive Education's Toll on Millennial Minds / 7:28]

They erase our history (and our literature). No nation or culture is free of misdeeds, but they hold America (and, again, Western Civilization in general) to a standard that has never been achieved, ever... and then use that impossible standard to denigrate this greatest, most exceptional nation and civilization.

(HT NinetyMiles)

They attempt to influence our children politically; anyone remember this video? Note that at the end it's juxtaposed with another youth video... I see similarities.

[The Obama Youth - Young children singing praise to Barack Obama / 4:24]

Notice the vapid, empty-eyed adoring looks of the parents, the Obama "O" on the wall of the classroom... and then see the added footage showing how eerie this early-youth programming can be. I remember the Obama "O" sign that was discussed at one point - and was vastly disappointed that, in 2008, the crowds at the DNC nomination didn't do it en masse to cries of "Obama! Obama!" One Nation, Under a New Obama Salute:

"Our goal is to see a crowd of 75,000 people at Obama's nomination speech holding their hands above their heads, fingers laced together in support of a new direction for this country, a renewed hope, and acceptance of responsibility for our future," says Rick Husong, owner of The Loyalty Inc. ... "We thought, 'Let's try and start a movement where even while walking down the street, people would hold up the O and you would know that they were for Obama,' " says Husong.

We have people that used to be shunned now reading to our children...

And some are sex predators; Drag Queen Storytime Reader Previously Charged with Sexual Assault of a Child Under the Age of 14. They are open groomers for promiscuity, homosexuality, transgenderism (and another example), and pedophilia, and start it early on; e.g., Pro-LGBT Teacher Admits Her Plan To Brainwash Children, And It's Worse Than You Imagined (bolding added):

But while many teachers deny they are trying to impose their beliefs, and claim to be teaching children “tolerance” and “diversity”, one teacher admitted her sick plan to corrupt America’s youth.

*And even worse, she admitted the LGBT community actually targets children as young as 4-years-old.

But what’s their goal?

*It’s simple – the LGBT community knows they are in a battle for the heart and soul of America, and by targeting young children; they are planting dangerous seeds into impressionable young minds.

Grooming starts early; Gay Man Admits That 'Drag Queen Story Time' Is 'Grooming the Next Generation' (link in original):

Leslie Alexander. a member of the community. told the Lafayette Daily

... Advertiser, "This is not about tolerance or anti-bullying. It is a direct and intentional effort to create gender confusion and doubt among very young children at the very time they need solid guidance and understanding. The intent is to plant a seed to make children more likely to question their sexuality or gender at a later age."

Why? Because homosexuality, by definition, does not reproduce, so the practice must be spread by other means – consider that, in Canada, one “trans” kid is less than three years old (bolding added):

*Dr. Wong also said his youngest ‘patient’ is only 2 ¾ years old.

“This 125-fold increase in transgender children over the last 10 years is a clear sign that the Government and the Ministry of Children and Family Development need to step in and protect the children of our province from an unproven ideology and its damaging consequences in the sterilization, lifelong medicalization and mutilation of the children of British Columbia.

Anyone with the least knowledge of the literature on social contagions would recognize this as one, given the extreme male-to-female ratio change, the 125-fold increase over the last 10 years, and trans kids getting their knowledge from peers, over the Internet and in school.”

Sounds to me like doctors inventing problems to then treat the patients convinced they have a problem! Also, this queering / transing effort is intercontinental; Paris Library to Hold ‘Queer for Kids’ Workshop (links in original, bolding added):

According to the Queer for Kids Facebook page event, the workshop will consist of two separate parts. A “diversity bingo” will see 10- to 14-year-olds “read, discover, and share works and works introducing otherness to a young audience through playful and creative Bingo.”

The Queer for Kids workshop is not the only class set to take place during the week by organisers. Another entitled, “L’Antre fessue, or how to play with your ass...”

...

The promotion of LGBT material to children is not limited to France. In Sweden, drag queens have participated in story-telling events in public libraries and books aimed at preschoolers have tackled the topic, as well.

And another example of the international effort! If you don't accede to it they'll take away your children. Additionally, they prevent parents from finding out what they teach, and override them when they object. Consider this evasion of the spirit of the disclosure law to stymie concerned parents (bolding added):

[A] kindergarten teacher staged what is being called a "transition ceremony" during class for a five-year-old boy who supposedly thinks he's a girl. This was done without parental notification.

School officials defended the teacher and their decision not to inform parents because gender identity isn't considered a part of sex education in California, and as such, is not subject to parental consent or opt-out laws.

This is a mental-evasion, pretzel-rational bypassing of the law's clear intent worthy of Islamic tawriya:

[Bill Warner, PhD: Deception in Political Islam / 5:37]

And while knowledge of Islam is critical in this world seeing jihad everywhere, this is outright pushing of it (of course, the history of Islam as the greatest murder machine in human history is ignored). For example; Public school teaches the shahada, the Islamic prayer for conversions:

So we must all make our voices heard on this most recent revelation that public schools in Seminole County, and across the state of Florida, are not only teaching the five pillars of Islam, but that high school students are being taught the shahada, which is the Islamic prayer that is recited when a person converts to Islam. Student assignments also include having to make prayer rugs.

Just imagine the outrage if public school students were assigned to study the Rosary, or required to make a set of Tefillin and put them on, and say the prayers. Or write a letter to their parents about converting to Judaism or Hinduism (article is actually about Islam). They're relentless in everything they do in schools, from K through 12.

[Activists Take Over Colorado Education / 3:54]

Again, there's nothing wrong with learning about multiple religions. There's something vastly wrong with this ass-kissing of Islam - to the point where it's plain to anyone with three or more brain cells that it's outright proselytizing for it.

Concluded in Part B.
